IconMaker is quite an easy to use application that can convert common image formats to icons. The program comes with the essential tools exclusively, so in case Photoshop or all the other complex products are not your cup of tea, this may very well be. And the design of the GUI is the living proof that IconMaker is very user-friendly, with all tools nicely organized in the left part of the main window. Furthermore, there are no less than four preview panels for the original image, transparency layer, icon preview and transparency preview, respectively. Just as expected since we're dealing with an icon creator, IconMaker lets you choose the icon dimensions, with available options ranging in between 16xx256. There are several editing utilities included, such as a dropper, a transparency brush, zoom and selection tools, all of which are available right in the main window. Aside for helping you convert JPG, GIF and PNG photos to icons, IconMaker can also create cursors, with just one dedicated option in this regard in order to select the hotpoint. IconMaker doesn't hamper system performance and it runs flawlessly on all Windows iterations. It can save your projects to image formats, but also to ICO and CUR extensions. Overall, IconMaker is one basic app that does its job and nothing more. The basic tools are there, and so is a simple interface to easily interact with all users. No help manual is included though, so this is one thing to be improved in the next versions. What's New In?

Ipsos is a multi-purpose application to collect, analyze and visualize data. The application provides users with a fast and simple method to conduct on-line, centralized and secure surveys with a good number of features. In a word, Ipsos can be easily described as a survey maker, yet it was built with the simplicity of one. In addition to the default features found in the software, the comprehensive library of survey components at your disposal will allow you to create surveys and customize them, whereas the export components will allow you to share your research, export data into well-known data formats (CSV, tab-delimited, Excel, Access and SPSS) and generate presentations. As for the functions of the application, it offers a simple, intuitive and intuitive user interface with a wide variety of specialized features. Moreover, you can create new surveys, export surveys, import your files and share them easily and quickly. There are four main components included in the application, each one with their own set of features. Survey Builder lets you create new surveys and run them, as well as customize them. There's no limit to the number of surveys that you can create with it. For each survey, you can collect data through a variety of different ways, with more or less attributes, as well as the number of cells required per survey. Surveys can be done online and offline, for example, if you take a picture and turn it into a survey automatically or you want to add survey cards to photos taken on your camera. Survey Analyser takes the data that you've gathered in your survey, with all the information that you have, and creates bar graphs, pie charts and other diagrams, to help you better comprehend your results. Surveys can be shared easily as well, with the export component. Moreover, Survey Analyzer provides lists of the participants who took part in the survey, as well as participants who didn't. Survey Exporter provides you with the ability to extract data from surveys, including survey results and surveys themselves, and save them to your computer. It can save it into a variety of different formats, such as CSV, Excel, Access and SPSS. You can also organize and share your documents easily, and present them in your own way with the presentation component. The presentation component includes a variety of slide shows, charts and lists. The presentation editor provides a System Requirements:

MP1.22 Patch Notes: 1) Added a new mechanic called Degradation that allows for an organic degradation system to occur when the enemy drops below 100% health. The more that the enemy loses, the more they will attack the player. 2) An optional game option has been added that if enabled will keep the player from dropping health when a weapon is damaged. This will prevent unintended match loss. 3) An optional game option has been added that will allow for the player to not have to stand directly next to the enemies to be able to
